

Funds will create jobs and save taxpayer money

Washington, DC - Congressman John Adler announced that Evesham will receive nearly $192,800 from the recovery package for energy efficiency projects. The funding will assist officials in the installation of solar panels at four municipal buildings.

"New Jersey's middle class homeowners pay too much in taxes and this funding will provide much needed support," Congressman Adler said. "This project will spur job creation, help conserve energy, and save taxpayers money. Evesham deserves its fair share of federal funding."

Mayor Randy Brown said, "This funding will go a long way in helping our community complete this project, put residents back to work, and save taxpayer money. We are going to reduce our energy usage and bring revenue into our community. I would like to thank Congressman Adler for his continued support of our efforts."

The money is being distributed through the Energy Efficiency Block Grants program, which is funded by the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. The grants are used to support energy-saving initiatives and improve energy efficiency in transportation, buildings, and other sectors. The funding will be distributed for a variety of projects including creating financial incentive programs for energy efficiency improvements, investing in transportation programs that conserve energy, and supporting projects to reduce and capture methane and other greenhouse gas emissions from landfills.
